PHILOSOPHY COURSES

SPRING 2027

PHI 1103 Introduction to Philosophy | Multiple sections.

PHI 1113 Introduction to Logic | Multiple sections.

PHI 1123 Introduction to Ethics | Multiple sections.

PHI 2223 Philosophy of Fantasy Sports | MW 3:30–4:45

This course uses the framework of fantasy sports to explore core concepts in political philosophy, including justice, legitimacy, and fairness. Dr. Rodiero.

PHI 3023 Business Ethics | TT 3:30–4:45

A philosophical exploration of how to recognize, analyze, and implement ethical decisions within the multivalued contexts of the various fields of business. Dr. Burmeister.

PHI 3033 History of Western Philosophy II | MW 3:30–4:45

A survey of major figures from the Renaissance through contemporary philosophy. History I is not required. Dr. Lebanidze.

PHI 3113 Philosophy of Law | MW 12:30–1:45

This course introduces major thinkers and debates in jurisprudence, examining the nature and justification of law, legal interpretation, the relationship between law and morality, punishment, and the duty to obey the law. Dr. Rodiero.

PHI 3153 Aesthetics | MW 2:00–3:15

We'll try to get a grip on beauty, ugliness, the sublime, art, entertainment, nature, and their proper role in daily life. Is beauty subjective, in the eye of the beholder, or objective, "out there" to be enjoyed by everyone? Is beauty related to truth and goodness—or harmful, rooted in the selfish ego? Does art aim at beauty or is it another kind of project altogether? Dr. Dyck.

PHI 3123 Philosophy of Religion | TT 11:00–12:15

A critical inquiry into the rational justification of central theistic beliefs, with emphasis on the traditional philosophical arguments for and against the existence of God. Dr. Neal.

PHI 3173 Social and Political Philosophy | MW 2:00–3:15

An advanced exploration of justice and legitimacy with an emphasis on contemporary theory. Topics include Liberalism, Republicanism, Socialism, and Libertarianism. Is equality truly valuable? Who deserves to rule? Should society aim at the perfection of the human spirit? What are the proper limits on the government's power to coerce individuals? Dr. Erck.

PHI 3323 Medical Ethics | TT 2:00–3:15; TT 3:30–4:45

A philosophical study of situations requiring ethical decision making in the areas of medicine. Dr. Moffatt.
